TAFT ACCUSES FDR OF POWER GRAB IN FIXING OF PRICES

Republican Senator Hits
"Incompetence" of Administration

SPRINGFIELD, May 3.—Republican Sen. Robert A. Taft of Cincinnati charges the Roosevelt administration with incompetence and says that "the method by which the President is undertaking to fix prices is the most outrageous power grab which this country has ever seen."

"The fixing of prices is bound to lead to the fixing of profits," he said last night at a junior chamber of commerce meeting. "Ultimately must lead to the fixing of wages."

Cites Confusion

Taft said that while "I believe that some such powers are justified by the tremendous defense program and the tremendous amount of money the government must borrow at present in this field there is a complete confusion among government bureaus."

In addition to the federal reserve board, the treasury department, the agriculture department, the Commodity Credit Corporation and the justice department, all seeking to control price levels, the President has named Leon Henderson to head the price administration and civilian supply—an agency never authorized by congress, the senator said.

"This is a substantial step toward that government by executive order which now exists in Germany and Italy," Taft declared.

Taft contended the administration was attempting "to use the defense crisis as a basis for usurping powers congress never has been willing to give by law, to regulate everything and everybody."

Hits Hopkins Appointment

Of Harry Hopkins' appointment to direct the lend-lease program, Taft said:

"Any administration which takes away the administration of the $7,000,000,000 lend-lease program from (William S.) Knudsen and gives it to Harry Hopkins brands himself as completely incompetent and inefficient."

Taft said that the various new agencies to deal with defense production, labor relations and fiscal matters present "a picture of a new bureaucracy, completely under the President's direction, superimposed on the complicated bureaucratic setup already created by congress."

President Makes Formal
Announcement of Extra
Tax Needs

"ABILITY TO PAY"
IS SUGGESTED BASE

Demands Equity and Hits
"Excluded Elements of Income"

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, May 3.— Congress today began hunting in earnest for additional revenue after hearing from President Roosevelt that "a minimum" of $3,500,000,000 in extra taxes would be needed to pay part of the extraordinary defense costs.

The goal, announced by the President last night in a letter to Chairman Doughton (D-NC) of the house ways and means committee, was the same as recommended previously by Treasury Secretary Morgenthau.

Won't Lower Sights

The stress, however, which Mr.
Roosevelt laid upon the duty of every American to contribute to the nation's defense "in accordance with his talents and treasure" emphasized the administration's determination not to lower its sights in seeking additional funds.

In a letter made public at Charlottesville, Va., where he was visiting at the home of his military aide, Major General Edwin M. Watson, the President told Doughton:
"I hope your committee, with the help of the treasury, will formulate a tax bill which will convince the country that a national defense program intended to protect our democracy is not going to make the rich richer and the poor poorer."

Without specifically listing sources from which an additional $3,500,000,000 could be collected, Mr. Roosevelt declared that additional taxes
"should be based on the principle of ability to pay." He also recommended the federal revenue system be made "evasion-proof and so determined."

RECLASSIFY MEN

Boards to Ferret Out Those Needed In Supplying Weapons

Selective Service boards will be directed to reconsider the classification of all 1-A men and reclassify those required in the national defense supply program, Lieut. Col.
C. W. Goble, state draft chief, announced today.

The officer referred to a letter from President Roosevelt to the office of production management in which the executive urged a speedup in the manufacture and use of machine tools.

The Salem draft board, No. 2 for Columbiana county, has 131 men in Class 1-A at the present time and between 40 and 45 in Class 2-A, eligibles who are deferred for occupational reasons, Clerk G. M. Griffith disclosed.

"The Selective Service system in Ohio will co-operate to the utmost in carrying out the announced policy of the President," said Colonel Goble.

"All local selective service boards are being directed to immediately reconsider the classification of all Class 1-A men and those who are tentatively in Class 1, to assure that none of the men who are required in the national defense supply program are retained in Class 1-A, but are reclassified in Class 2-A and deferred for occupational reasons."

ACCIDENT, DEATH TOLL INCREASING

Distinct Gain In Shown In District, State In Four Months

The traffic accident and death toll on district highways within the jurisdiction of the Salem state highway patrol sub-station has climbed ahead during the first four months of 1941 records showed today.

In a state survey, some of the nine metropolitan counties reported traffic fatalities running four and five times higher than in 1940.
Salem state highway patrolmen
so far this year have investigated 201 accidents. Ten persons were killed in the eight fatal crashes which occurred up to May 1.

This compares with 153 accidents for the first four months of 1940, six deaths in six fatal mishap. There were 131 accidents for the same period in '39, with seven deaths in six fatal crashes.

Excessive Speed Blamed

Excessive speed is the major factor in nearly all traffic deaths, patrol officers explained.

Columbiana county's traffic toll alone, however, is four deaths to May 1, against seven for the same period last year.

Church Will Observe
Christian Family Week

as the speaker. The second meeting, in the form of a picnic dinner, will be held at 8 p. m. Thursday. Music and singing will be program features. The third meeting will be an event of next Sunday, at 10:15 a. m., with Rev. H. E. Stoudt, the pastor, delivering a Mother's day sermon.

26 BRITISH PLANES LOST,
IRAQ CLAIMS

London Reports Only That
"Fighting Continues",
In Second Day

NAZI RADIO OPENS
PROPAGANDA DRIVE

Broadcasts That Iraqis Have Appealed To Arab Forces

(By Associated Press)
War flamed fiercely in a graveyard of empires as the battle between British and Iraq forces went into its second day in an area crowded with memories of vanished
Babylonian, Assyrian, Chaldean, Persian, Greek, Roman, Saracen and Turk power.

London said only "the fighting continues", but an Iraq communiqué declared that 26 British planes had been destroyed on Habbaniyah airfield, British base 60 miles west of fabled Baghdad, and that British motorized detachments had failed in an attempt to occupy another airfield.

Nazis Open Propaganda

Whether the German aid reportedly requested by Iraq's premier, Raschid Ali Al Gailani, was beginning to arrive was not yet evident; but the German radio brought its heavy propaganda artillery into play with ominous suggestions of "a major test between British imperialism and the entire Arab world."

Vital significance was attached to the fact that in Iraq the British now are fighting under a disadvantage that did not face them in Greece; namely, that in Iraq it is the British who are being called aggressors by the government and the Germans who are reportedly being called on to rescue a little country from the "in-vader."

Meanwhile the German radio broadcast that Iraq's government had appealed to the Arabs in Palestine to take up arms against the British, declaring Iraq's fight was a general fight for the liberation of the Arabs; that British planes had attempted to bomb the Baghdad residence of Iraq's premier; that strong native troop contingents from Saudi Arabia were massing on the fourth trans-Jordan border; that the British minister to Iraq had been "chased" by an angry crowd in the streets of Baghdad.

No News From Baghdad

A British broadcast said "Basra (where British troops recently landed) is quiet, but there is no news of what is happening in Baghdad."

What attitude Turkey would take toward the developments in Iraq was still unclear. But on the North African front, Axis forces took advantage of Britain's new embarrassment to strike with renewed vigor at beleaguered Tobruk where the German high command claimed deep penetration of the British defense lines despite stiff resistance.

Lover Come Back

by BARRETT WILLOUGHBY

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

Under the prismatic brilliancy of crystal chandeliers, "Russian Night" at Echo House had reached a high point of gaiety. Sondra, standing alone on the bottom step of the wide stairs that curved upward from the reception room, was a radiant little figure in an old gown of fine creamy lace. Girdled high with a gold cord, it fell in graduated flounces to spread wide about her small, gold-sandaled feet. Her shoulders were bare, her short curls dusted with golden powder; and from one wrist dangled a gilt nosegay at the end of a long gold ribbon.

With a half-smile of happiness, she watched the colorful intermingling of the hundred guests who had put on the finery of their ancestors to do honor to Captain O'Moore. In ruffles and bustles and wide-winged skirts, in baggy trousers, high stocks, and long flowered waistcoats, they danced in the drawing room, lounged in the dining room, shifted about the samovar in the reception room, and flirted on the stairs.

Most pleasing of all to Sondra was the fact that her grandfather was having a wonderful time. Jovial, silver-haired and handsome in his best uniform, he sat near the huge punch bowl in the dining room, holding court. A most democratic court it was, where O'Moore fishermen in "go-ashore kit" came and went in gayest amity among the costumed members of Sitka's social elite. All drank the Captain's health with bows and verbal flourishes; while he, with witty tongue, rolled off responses in English, Russian, and water-front Scandinavian—all tinged with a brogue that grew more pronounced after each glass.

Polena, calm and competent, directed her corps of Indian servants, and presided with Jodin over the buffet supper. As the old housekeeper passed Sondra on some hospitable errand, the girl reached out and caught her hand. "It's a wonderful party, Polena. It's—it's—perfect." Yet, without knowing why, she felt it was not quite perfect, for her. Even as she spoke she caught herself scanning the gay throng for one who could not possibly be there; and frowned, resenting Jean Reynall's power to make her feel his absence.

Her roving eye was caught by the tall figure of the Forest Man, standing beside the closed library door. Unmasked, his fringed buckskins inconspicuous in this gathering, he was watching the crowd through serenely thoughtful eyes.

Although she came up quietly behind him, the Forest Man turned instantly to greet her. "Sondra, my dear! It was kind of you to ask me to your splendid party."

She gave him both her hands, and it touched her to see the gray that had come into his blond beard and hair during his three-year absence. "Oh, but it's good to have you back, Forest Man!" she told him, sincerely. "I hope you're here to stay a long, long time."

"I plan to," he said quietly. "The spruce here is perfect for the radio masts I must get out, so I'm building a cabin at the Place of Trees. A permanent camp. I want you to visit me there, just as you used to years ago. Remember?"

"member." She patted his affectionately. "And I'll come. I have my own runabout now, you know." She was about to bring Jean Reynall's name up when Kemp came sauntering toward them. He was splendidly bizarre in his silken copy of the Killer Whale blanket and crest hat. The hat came low on his darkened hair, and an Indian mask hid his face.

"How!" Laughing, Sondra lifted her arm in an Indian salute. "The mask must be miserably hot, Kemp. Why don't you take it off now?"

"Must wear it until I've staged Liane's show. That comes right after this waltz. Shall we dance it, Sondra?"

A strange voice spoke from behind them. "Sorry, Chief Killer Whale. This one is promised to the U. S. Navy."

Sondra's heart did a sudden zoom and dive. That brusque, quarter-deck tone bore not the slightest resemblance to Jean's; yet she knew it was Reynall, even as she turned to face the commanding figure in the time-dimmed uniform of an American naval officer. Black mask and white wig could not disguise the unmistakable set of his head; his breadth of shoulder. Held speechless by his audacity, she had let him sweep her into the tide of dancers before she found her tongue.

"Captain Reynall," she said in a tense, guarded voice. "You have only a few minutes to escape from this house before everyone must unmask. Immediately after this waltz, Liane is going to—"

"I know. She told me all about her dance. But I came to see you to talk to you, Sondra." He suddenly bent his head, and Sondra was stirred by the joyous wonder in his low voice. "Darling... I didn't come to tell you this, but I can't help myself. You're an adorable, delectable little cream-and-gold figurine in that gown. You're like something lovely out of a dream. You're—"

"Captain Reynall! There are a dozen husky fishermen here who would be delighted to throw you out if my grandfather gave the word. And he'll give it—the moment he recognizes you."

"Are you going to rush right over and tell him?" There was laughter in his voice. He swept her past Kemp who was standing beside the piano. Even in her mental turmoil Sondra was conscious she had never before danced so smoothly with any man.

"I—No. Not if you leave at once."

"But I can't leave. Not until you give me a chance to tell—"

"I'm not interested in anything you may have to tell me. I despise you. I won't listen to you. Now go!"

"Not at all. I'll stay here—and unmask with the others."

"You wouldn't dare!" Yet Sondra knew he would dare. She saw Kemp's mask slowly turning to follow their every move. Her fingers tightened on Reynall's shoulder. "Look! That's Kemp Starbuck in the Killer Whale blanket. I believe he suspects who you are. Please, oh, please—go, before you—spoil my party."

"Sondra!" The sudden gravity and sternness in his tone impressed her, despite herself. "Understand—this is no personal matter. I must tell you something—for your own good. Give me five minutes with you alone, where we can't be overheard."

"But—but how can I, with people all over the place? There's not a corner that someone's not likely to barge into. I—"

"Meet me outside, then. Behind the old banya."

She shook her head. "Can't leave my guests. A mob would be searching for me if I disappeared. I shan't have a single minute, unless—"

Liane's dance flashed into her mind. While it was in progress, there'd be at least ten minutes with these rooms in darkness and all eyes focused on the dancer's dais. Sondra might slip out then, and not be missed. But—

While she hesitated, she saw Kemp weaving toward them through the dancers. Something purposeful in his stride set her heart thumping with near-panic. She knew, instinctively, she must avert any meeting between Kemp and Jean tonight.

"You must go—now! Quick, before Kemp—"

"Do I get that five minutes?"

"Yes, yes, yes! But let's get out of here. Swing off into the reception room. Jean bent his head to hear Sondra's tense directions.

"We'll go together to the front door, as if to step into the garden. Then you go out alone. When the coast is clear—just after Liane's dance starts—I'll slip out and meet you at the banya."

But just as they reached the front door, it swung open and a hilarious group of girls and men were marshaled in by a laughing pair of O'Moore's young boat-captains. One of the pair ushered their charges toward the dining room, exhorting, "Right this way, ladies and gentlemen, for the big show!"

The other closed the door and placed himself before it. When Sondra motioned him aside so Jean could go out, he spread his arms, grinning goodnaturedly. "Sorry, Miss Sondra. Captain's orders. Nobody to leave the house till after Miss Bootin's act. Look, the waltz is ended, so it won't be long now!"

Sondra turned to look. The musicians were leaving their dais, and Kemp, thank heavens, was mounting it to set the stage for the climax of Liane's dance. Polena's boys were placing canvas chairs for the audience.

A few minutes more, and the reception room would be deserted. Jean couldn't stay here then without attracting disastrous attention. She must get him out of sight until unobserved, he could leave the house for the banya.

As her mind desperately shuttled expedients, she remembered the locked library, and the key Polena had put behind the potted fern. That was it! She'd let Jean into the library under cover of the chattering, expectant crowd now pressing toward the doors of the dining and drawing rooms. After those doors were closed, and the overture to Liane's dance well under way, it would be safe for him to slip out.

She drew Jean in front of the library door and explained the plan in a hasty undertone. "Got it?" she finished.

He was chuckling behind his mask. "Okay. Do I slug the guard on the way out?"

"Oh, he'll be inside watching Liane, I hope. But if he isn't, you can drop out of the library window."

Jean disappeared into the library so adroitly that even Sondra scarcely noticed. She knotted the library key on the gold ribbon about her wrist, and joined the last-minute rush of laggards headed for the drawing room.

At the door she encountered Kemp, still wearing his grotesque mask. "Ah, there you are, Sondra!" He caught her hand, and kept it. "Is everyone inside? We must close these doors in just a minute now." He beckoned to the guard at the front entrance, and as the big fellow came over, Kemp motioned him inside. "Mustn't miss the show, Jerry."

Jerry passed inside, and Sondra's heart gave a little leap. That left nothing in the way of Jean's departure, once the door was closed.

The orchestra struck up the first movement of the overture; but Kemp still lingered in the doorway his masked face turning this way and that, as if looking for someone in the reception room. "I don't see our gallant Navy man," he remarked. "Has he fled, like Cinderella, before the stroke of midnight?" His light, ironic tone revealed little more than did his Indian mask; yet Sondra knew, without a doubt, that he had recognized Reynall.

She managed a careless laugh.

"Oh, I sent him off, Kemp. He was—that insufferable Jean Reynall."

"Really!" Kemp sounded amused. "Rather bearding the lion, wasn't he, coming here uninvited?"

"Boy Scout bravado. Let's skip it."

Alexander came up. "You may close the doors now," directed Kemp. "Then go in and stand by the drawing room light switch. Alexander, I'll be at the other switch, in the dining room. When I signal, you turn off your lights—exactly as we rehearsed it. Remember?"

But Alexander wasn't quite sure. Kemp began a hurried explanation.

The music, with quickened beat, swept into the final movement of the overture.

Sondra looked at Kemp's back, momentarily turned toward her. Then, unobserved, she slipped through the butler's pantry to the kitchen, and thence out the back door into the night-dim garden. (To be continued)

TAFT ACCUSES FDR OF POWER GRAB IN FIXING OF PRICES

Republican Senator Hits "Incompetence" of Administration

SPRINGFIELD, May 3.—Republican Sen. Robert A. Taft of Cincinnati charges the Roosevelt administration with incompetence and says that "the method by which the President is undertaking to fix prices is the most outrageous power grab which this country has ever seen."

"The fixing of prices is bound to lead to the fixing of profits," he said last night at a junior chamber of commerce meeting. "Ultimately it must lead to the fixing of wages."

Cites Confusion

Taft said that while "I believe that some such powers are justified by the tremendous defense program and the tremendous amount of money the government must borrow, at present in this field there is a complete confusion among government bureaus."

In addition to the federal reserve bank, the treasury department, the agriculture department, the commodity credit corporation and the justice department, all seeking to control price levels, the President has named Leon Henderson to head the price administration and civilian supply—an agency never authorized by congress, the senator said.

"This is a substantial step toward that government by executive order which now exists in Germany and Italy," Taft declared. "Taft contended the administration was attempting to use the defense crisis as a basis for usurping powers congress never has been willing to give by law, to regulate everything and everybody."

Hits Hopkins Appointment

Of Harry Hopkins' appointment to direct the lease-lend program, Taft said:

"Any administration which takes away the administration of the $7,000,000,000 lease-lend program from (William S.) Knudsen and gives it to Harry Hopkins brands itself as completely incompetent and inefficient."

Taft said that the various new agencies to deal with defense production, labor relations and fiscal matters present "a picture of a new bureaucracy, completely under the President's direction, superimposed on the complicated bureaucratic setup already created by congress."

DEFENSE FUND DRIVE OPENED BY CONGRESS

President Makes Formal Announcement of Extra Tax Needs

"ABILITY TO PAY" IS SUGGESTED BASE

Demands Equity and Hits "Excluded Elements of Income"

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON, May 3.—Congress today began hunting in earnest for additional revenue after hearing from President Roosevelt that "a minimum" of $3,500,000,000 in extra taxes would be needed to pay part of the extraordinary defense costs.

The goal, announced by the President last night in a letter to Chairman Doughton (D-NC) of the house ways and means committee, "is the same as recommended previously by Treasury Secretary Morgenthau."

Won't Lower Sights The stress, however, which Mr. Roosevelt laid upon the duty of every American to contribute to the nation's defense "in accordance with his talents and treasure" emphasized the administration's determination not to lower its sights in seeking additional funds.

In a letter made public at Charlottesville, Va., where he was visiting at the home of his military aide, Major General Edwin M. Watson, the President told Doughton:

"I hope your committee, with the help of the treasury, will formulate a tax bill which will convince the country that a national defense program intended to protect our democracy is not going to make the rich richer and the poor poorer."

Without specifically listing sources from which an additional $3,500,000,000 could be collected, Mr. Roosevelt declared that additional taxes "should be based on the principle of ability to pay." He also recommended the federal revenue system be made "evasion-proof and so defensible."

RECLASSIFY MEN AS INDUSTRY AID

Boards to Ferret Out Those Needed In Supplying Weapons

Selective Service boards will be directed to reconsider the classification of all 1-A men and reclassify those required in the national defense supply program, Lieut. Col. C. W. Goble, state draft chief, announced today.

The officer referred to a letter from President Roosevelt to the office of production management in which the executive urged a speed-up in the manufacture and use of machine tools.

The Salem draft board, No. 2 for Columbiana county, has 131 men in Class 1-A at the present time and between 40 and 45 in Class 2-A, eligibles who are deferred for occupational reasons, Clerk G. M. Griffith disclosed.

"The Selective Service system in Ohio will co-operate to the utmost in carrying out the announced policy of the President," said Colonel Goble.

"All local selective service boards are being directed to immediately reconsider the classification of all Class 1-A men and those who are tentatively in Class 1, to assure that none of the men who are required in the national defense supply program are retained in Class 1-A, but are reclassified in Class 2-A, and deferred for occupational reasons."

In a state survey, some of the nine metropolitan counties reported traffic fatalities running four and five times higher than in 1940. Salem state highway patrolmen so far this year have investigated 201 accidents. Ten persons were killed in the eight fatal crashes which occurred up to May 1.

This compares with 153 accidents for the first four months of 1940, six deaths in six fatal mishaps. There were 131 accidents for the same period in '39, with seven deaths in six fatal crashes.

26 BRITISH PLANES LOST, IRAQ CLAIMS

London Reports Only That "Fighting Continues", In Second Day

NAZI RADIO OPENS PROPAGANDA DRIVE

Broadcasts That Iraqis Have Appealed To Arab Forces

(By Associated Press) War flamed fiercely in a graveyard of empires as the battle between British and Iraq forces went into its second day in an area crowded with memories of vanished Babylonian, Assyrian, Chaldean, Persian, Greek, Roman, Saracen and Turk power.

London said only "the fighting continues," but an Iraq communiqué declared that 26 British planes had been destroyed on Habbaniyah airfield, British base 60 miles west of fabled Baghdad, and that British motorized detachments had failed in an attempt to occupy another airfield.

Nazis Open Propaganda

Whether the German aid reportedly requested by Iraq's premier, Raschid Ali Al Gailani, was beginning to arrive was not yet evident; but the German radio brought its heavy propaganda artillery into play with ominous suggestions of "a major test between British imperialism and the entire Arab world."

Vital significance was attached to the fact that in Iraq the British now are fighting under a disadvantage that did not face them in Greece; namely, that in Iraq it is the British who are being called aggressors by the government and the Germans who are reportedly being called on to rescue a little country from the "invader."

Meanwhile the German radio broadcast that Iraq's government had appealed to the Arabs in Palestine to take up arms against the British, declaring Iraq's fight was a general fight for the liberation of the Arabs; that British planes had attempted to bomb the Baghdad residence of Iraq's premier; that strong native troop contingents from Saudi Arabia were massing on the fourth trans-Jordan border; that the British minister to Iraq had been "chased" by an angry crowd in the streets of Baghdad.

No News From Baghdad

A British broadcast said "Basra (where British troops recently landed) is quiet, but there is no news of what is happening in Baghdad."

What attitude Turkey would take toward the developments in Iraq was still unclarified. But on the North African front, Axis forces took advantage of Britain's new embarrassment to strike with renewed vigor at beleaguered Tobruk, where the German high command claimed deep penetration of the British defense lines despite stiff resistance.

MR. WILKIE'S TIMELY QUESTION

In this tricky business of exporting, no one can deny that Wendell Wilkie is the greatest living expert on what is going through the mind of the Republican presidential candidate of 1940. His knowledge in that particular field is unsurpassed.

Replying to Charles A. Lindbergh's complaint, in a recent issue of Collier's, that direction of the country must be left to the "experts" . . . who have created the greatest national debt in American history, and still left us a nation unprepared in a world in the midst of war . . . who failed either to maintain peace or to prepare for war," Mr. Wilkie asks a timely question of his fellow Americans.

Writing in the current issue of the same magazine, he asks: "If we don't leave it to them, to whom are we to leave it under our constitutional system? Without revolution we cannot have a different administration for four years. I certainly did all I could to remove it from power last November. But the democratic process spoke. I believe in the democratic process."

One of the astonishing things about the United States is the way its citizens periodically forget they are not living under a parliamentary form of government. Some of them seem to be proceeding on the assumption that if they continue to hammer away at the government it will be forced to call another election. It would be good for them, good for the country too, if they'd take a few minutes to look over the Constitution. A president, it says, shall be elected every four years. It's final.

THICKER THAN WATER

This war, like all others, is muddled by oversimplified slogans. Thus, to Americans it becomes a war "to save the democracies," with scant attention to the obvious fact there are no democracies. The world war slogan—"to make the world safe for democracy" was more accurate.

But always behind the slogans, as the disillusionists were fond of pointing out after 1919, is the fact. Wars are fought over hard economic realities. National self-interest calls for violent resistance whenever certain points of security are threatened. Slogans that appeal to the emotion may conceal the truth, but they can't destroy it.

The United States, with a strong naval tradition, knows by instinct what it does not always admit it knows by confession: that its two vital points of security are the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. Freedom of the seas has been involved in one way or another in all its diplomacy and wars. Freedom of the seas is involved now. This nation is not going to lose the battle of the Atlantic by default.

Each move since the United States committed itself to the aid of Great Britain and its allies has brought the country closer to realization that national security demanded the power to dominate all the ocean area within striking distance of the mainland. That has been the meaning of the naval bases acquired from Great Britain. It is the meaning of the convoy-patrol problem. It is the meaning of the President's call for more ships. In a larger sense, it is the meaning of American determination to preserve Britain, because the British hold the balance of sea power.

It shouldn't be forgotten that in the first years of World War I, when Britain tried to close the Atlantic to American shipping there was almost as much resentment as Germany created later with its arrogant policy of sinking on sight. If the Nazis want to bring on another declaration of war from the United States, all they need to do is pick up where they left off the other time. Naval tradition is thicker than water.

CHIROPODY DEPT.

Pointing out that an army still fights on its feet and that the understands that the army, navy and marine corps don't issue oil for the purpose, a Mr. James Larwood of Jackson Heights, N. Y., has taken the trouble to send this newspaper—and presumably many others—a suggestion that draftees be advised to oil their feet. Napoleon told his troops to do it, he says, and the Bible mentions the anointing of the feet.

It is hard to disregard a bit of advice like this, even though cynicism prompts a suspicion that Mr. Larwood may have some connection with the oil business. He does not specify any kind of oil, however—just oil. So, in the absence of any better advice at the moment, draftees are hereby informed that at least one well wisher in this friendly country thinks enough of them to tell them about the advantages of oiling their feet before setting out on a march. At that, it's probably better than most of the advice they have been given by their well wishers.

THE STARS SAY:

For Sunday, May 4

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a most conflicting one. While the faculties and forces are keen, constructive and keyed to high pressure, yet there is danger of being carried to excess and regrets by excitement and emotional impulses which may have unfavorable reactions on the health and those immediately involved. Elders in the household may seem affected, unless patiently treated.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be under a menace of a year of fluctuating circumstances, with the abilities and ambitions keyed to achievement but beset by confusions, perils and several forms of menace and hazard. These seem largely to revolve around private relations, wherein elders, superiors, and those in the domestic circle or affectional life are involved. Safeguard and cherish all such relationships, lest they hamper constructive efforts.

A child born on this day should be enterprising, studious and responsible with much real ability and talent, but its inner life may suffer sorrow and defeat.

For Monday, May 5

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for a day of major significance, with matters of first magnitude coming to the fore for clever and sagacious as well as well-directed manipulation. Large and expansive opportunity, in connection with large corporations, secret bodies or industrial enterprises of first importance. And while the energies, initiative and practical abilities may be active the desired results may be defeated or miscarried through impetuous or reckless moves, by strife, estrangement or other over-indulgences. Shun extravagance.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be confronted by a year of great opportunity for growth, achievement and expansion, coming through influences of major scope. The forces and abilities are attuned to such advanced objectives but seem menaced by indomitable urges to express in the direction of violence, passion, indulgence and excess in one form or another. Such produce disruption, estrangement and ultimate defeat of excellent prospects, unless the brakes be put on. A child born on this day should be extremely talented and have great opportunity which it may undermine by wild, erratic and passionate behavior.

In complete accord with the Administration, Secretary Jesse H. Jones believes this country can carry a National debt of $90,000,000,000; then, when it reaches that towering height, the next jump will be to $100,000,000,000.

"Love is what makes a young man spend $100 for a diamond ring while he tries to keep warm all winter in last summer's raincoat."

Following his experience in Finland, Joe Stalin doubtless prefers getting something for nothing.

Pains are a sign of approaching age—especially more frequent pains in the neck.

THE BIRD WHO MADE THE SUN COME UP!

SOME FACTS ABOUT "LITTLE MEN"

Dwarfism Discussed by Dr. Clendening

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Here in Missouri, where I live, we have a number of studies on human sizes. One of my doctor acquaintances has made a long study and collection of giants, and I find a St. Louis colleague has contributed a study to a medical journal on the subject of dwarfs.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Dwarfism is caused by many different conditions. The mere fact of smallness in the group does not mean dwarfism. It is merely normal heredity. For instance, Shetland ponies and Clydesdales are horses, but it is perfectly natural for Shetland ponies to be small and Clydesdales to be large as an inherited characteristic.

There are three periods of growth and development: (1) infancy, from birth to two years, when growth is fairly rapid and steady; (2) childhood, from the age of 2 to 12, when growth is slow and gradual; and (3) adolescence, from 12 or 13 years to 18 years, when it is rapid and likely to be lumpy. At 18 to 20 years the bones have all become ossified and the skeleton simply grows heavier until about the age of 25 years.

Dwarfism may mean a stoppage of bony growth in any of these periods. The endocrine glands are often invoked to explain true dwarfism. They actually explain only a small number of cases.

Achondroplastic Dwarfs. Perhaps the commonest type of dwarf — one that everyone has seen at some time or other—has a normal trunk and head, but very short legs and very short arms. The head appears abnormally large but this is simply in comparison with the short stature. The chest and abdomen in these dwarfs is practically the same size as those of a normal individual. They are known as "achondroplastic dwarfs" and the condition has nothing to do with the endocrine glands and cannot be helped by the exhibition of the endocrine glands. Nor is it hereditary.

The fundamental abnormality is a lack of growth of the bones of the arms and legs at the extremities. Normally these extremities are cartilaginous and are replaced by bones in the course of development. These dwarfs are really similar to Pekingese dogs. The Pekingese is actually an achondroplastic dwarf.

The dwarf of good proportions is called "ateleiotic" — "a pocket edition of adults" — "a man seen through a reversed opera glass." Another form of dwarfism is due to rickets, which is simply a nutritional disease of infancy due to lack of Vitamin D and sunshine, and calcium and phosphorus in the diet.

Among the true endocrine dwarfs, there are several forms, some due to lack of secretion of one gland and some due to lack of secretion of another.

A great deal has been done in recent years in the way of attempting to treat dwarfs. There is no question, some of them can be made to grow several inches if the condition is properly diagnosed and recognized early enough in life.

Questions and Answers H. F. L. — "In regard to a small black spot under the skin. What is the cause and is there anything to do to remove it?"

Answer—The cause is usually the rupture of a small vein and it can be removed either by carbon dioxide snow, electrolysis, or possibly by a simple operation.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, 235 E. 45th st., New York. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Confesses Bombing

Dwight O. Thorne

Mysterious automobile dynamiting at Scranton, Pa., last November in which the son and daughter of the Scranton director of public health were killed was believed solved with the signed confession of Dwight O. Thorne, 32, that he had placed the dynamite in the automobile. County Attorney M. J. See of Louisa, Ky., said that Thorne walked into the sheriff's office at Louisa and said he hadn't slept "for three months" and wished to confess to a murder. According to See, Thorne claimed he placed the dynamite in the car of Dr. E. H. Rehorn, acting on orders of a man who wanted to gain revenge against the physician in connection with the loss of a coal mine compensation claim, allegedly due to testimony given by the doctor, William Rehorn, 19, and his sister, Lois, 17, children of the physician, were killed.

Lover Come Back

by BARRETT WILLOUGHBY

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

Clutching her lace draperies, Sondra paused for a quick look about, while her eyes adjusted themselves to the darkness. Near-by clumps of shrubbery were black, nebulous shapes. Beyond, the bay gleamed like polished onyx. Overhead, the copula beam cut a high pathway across the stars.

She had taken a few hurried steps toward the banya when she heard the orchestra sweep into the wild crescendo that heralded Liane's entry and the turning off of the lights inside. Not—

She caught her breath, startled. The copula beam winked out. Then she remembered that the beam switch was mounted alongside another one in the dining room. Kemp must have turned the wrong one.

A muffled burst of applause from the house behind her told her that Liane and her torches now held the floor of all in those darkened rooms. The way was clear for Jean Reynall to slip out from the library.

She paused to listen, but could hear no sound of approaching footsteps. The beam came on again, making the shadows here at the back seem darker by contrast with its seaward-reaching brilliance. She began to tiptoe along the path, looking back, now and then, in the hope of seeing Jean.

Sondra reached the banya and waited. Back of her the darkness of the banya in the alders cut her off from the house, making the spot isolated, eerie in the night.

A second passed and Jean Reynall did not come, a sixth sense woke in her, warning her that something was not—quite right. Though her reasoning mind scoffed at that, she began to edge back toward the path that led to the house.

She had reached a spot in front of the banya when she halted, uncertainly. Through a gap in the alders she could see the low door, always securely fastened ever since she could remember, now standing open. Had Jean misunderstood, and gone in there to wait? Darkly, she moved to the dark opening and stepped across the threshold into hollow blackness that smelled of old wood-smoke and scrubbed planks.

"Jean...?" Her voice sounded strange. "It's Sondra.... Are you here?"

She held her breath, listening. Nothing stirred. A peculiar, dead stillness seemed closing in on her—the stillness of a place heavily walled and half-buried in earth. She could hear nothing; see nothing; yet.... the roots of her hair began to tingle. She could.... feel, could.... smell—

The next thing she knew she was running madly toward the house, spurred on by blind, unreasoning terror. Her panic carried her round to the front entrance. There, in fumbling haste, she let herself inside and fell back, panting, against the door. The thumping of her heart seemed setting itself to the mad rhythm of the torch-dance music that throbbed insistently through the house.

In the warmth and light of the reception room, she began to be ashamed of her recent, senseless fright. But as her panic subsided, wrath against the unwitting cause of it mounted apace. Jean Reynall! Since his return, every contact between them had left her either angry or humiliated, or both. And tonight the exasperating creature must have misunderstood her hurried directions; must still be waiting for her in the library.

She started briskly for the library door, determined to get him out of the house as quickly as possible. As she did so, the saxophone in the other room soared into a high ululation. Simultaneously, the Thelington drums burst into a sustained, shuddering thunder, climaxed by a muffled explosion that seemed to make the very floor tremble under Sondra's feet.

She jerked to a startled stop. Then, remembering that this was where Liane touched off the Venetian Fire, she went on, feeling a twinge of regret because she was missing the spectacle.

She tried the knob of the library door, pressing inward as she turned. The door was locked.

Sondra was puzzled for a moment. She had left the door unlocked, and had the key tied to the ribbon about her waist. How had Jean managed to—but, of course! While he waited, he must have used a passkey to lock himself in against any chance intrusion.

Her own key turned smoothly. She eased the door partly open, wrinkling her nose at the smell of burned powder now drifting about. She took one step inside and stood, peering into the confused darkness.

Sondra reached for the light switch by the door, but her hand froze in mid-air. The blood drained from her body. For there, in the dim band of light that came from the reception room behind her, she saw the prostrate figure of a man, face down on the floor near the roll of soggy carpet.

She recoiled, but stood her ground, her eyes fearfully searching the gloom, made strange by shadows of stacked furniture. No sound. No movement. Yet her gaze was drawn and held by the impenetrable blackness cast by the half-open door by which she stood. An indefinable perception of dread seized her; a paralyzing numbness of fear, born of not knowing what it was she feared. Some primal sense told her that behind that door something—someone—was standing. Someone rigid and still, with the stillness of arrested action.

She tried to step back into the lighted reception room, but her feet, refused to move.

Then, from behind the door came a rustle of swift movement. A hand shot out into the band of light, reaching straight for her.

The next instant, the reception room light went out, leaving her

President Opens U. S. Defense Bond Drive

Secretary Morgenthau and President Roosevelt

After launching the U. S. defense bond drive in a speech broadcast from the White House in Washington, President Roosevelt purchases the first of the new savings bonds from Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr. The prices of the defense bonds, which may be purchased at banks and postoffices, begin at $25 which are purchased for $18.75, and range up to $10,000 denomination. Stamps are being sold, and can be purchased for 10 cents, 25 cents and 50 cents. They are to be saved in an album and with them the defense bonds can be purchased.

We'll have to inform him about the safe, of course; but since nothing was taken, I see no reason to spoil his happy evening by telling him of it tonight. I'll look about, have a talk with Alexander when he comes to, and then lay all the facts before the Captain tomorrow. How's that, darling?"

Sondra nodded assent, her gaze still fixed in bewilderment on the gaping safe. "It seems so—so fantastic!" she exclaimed. "Who on earth would—"

"I've some ideas about that," Kemp said briskly. "But first, let's see how he did it."

He moved closely at the safe door, scraping a thumbnail along the "Yellow soap. And look here!"

He pulled a short length of fine copper wire from under the wadded bearskin. "Annunciator wire. Hm-m-n.... A little nitroglycerine around the joint of the safe door... and the bearskin to muffle the explosion.... A tiny spark-coil and a big flashlight would serve very well to set off the charge—at the exact moment when the noise would best be covered by the finale of the music in the next room. By George! Whoever—"

"Miss Sondra!" They both turned to see Alexander slitting up, dazedly rubbing the side of his head. Sondra was at his side in an instant. "Are you all right, Alexander?"

"I'm okay, but—"

Kemp bent over the youth, his voice sharp with leashed excitement. "Do you know the man who struck you? Could you see him?"

"No—couldn't see," Alexander was making an obvious effort to collect his wits. "I think I hear some queer noise in library, just after Miss Liane's dance begins. I use my passkey and slip in quick, through door from drawing room. I shut the door, so I can switch on lights. Then I see somebody with flashlight, standing by the safe. The flashlight goes out, and—then—" he grinned uncertainly—"then I go out, too! That's all I know—until just now."

To be continued.

Falsely Philosophies

The philosophies of men are on trial today. Man's theories and ideologies are exploding like bombs. The inadequacy of human wisdom is being demonstrated. Present conditions prove the Bible is true and that all who try to leave God out are wrong.

Collapse in the material world is always preceded by collapse in the moral and spiritual realm. God's order is spiritual things first. Then material blessings follow. When material things are first and God last, depression and bankruptcy follow. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and all things shall be added unto you."

Skepticism and unbelief bring forth the fruit of lawlessness, revolutions, war, misery and dictatorship with its accompanying slavery. The loosening of moral and spiritual foundations through application of the destructionist philosophy of liberalism, made of this day have originated.

Evangelists Arrive At Lighthouse Tabernacle

Revival services will open tomorrow at the Lighthouse tabernacle, 175 W. State St., with Rev. M. R. Seales as pastor. Miss Elsie Allen and Miss Ella Parmenter, both of Toronto, Canada, are the evangelists. These gospel workers have just concluded a series of successful meetings at Erie, Pa.

For the past several years these ladies have been traveling together and are well known, especially throughout Canada, as outstanding singers and preachers. Their talent in song and music has proved of great interest at all their meetings. The services will continue every night, with the exception of Saturday, for three weeks. A cordial welcome is extended to the public.

If the weather is favorable this evening another open air service will be held at the corner of State St. and Broadway at 8 p. m. A special program of song and music will be presented by the evangelists, Allen and Parmenter. They will also speak at this service.

"Earnest Christians" Is Minister's Topic

Rev. George D. Keister, pastor of the Holy Trinity English Lutheran church, will speak Sunday morning at 11 on "Earnest Christians."

"There is much nominal Christianity in the world. We mean by that the accepting of the principles of Christ in name, but the failure of accepting wholeheartedly the implications of the Christian faith. There is a call for more earnestness in the efforts and plans of Christian people. This matter of the Kingdom of God must not be accepted in a halfhearted manner. We must be deeply in earnest about speeding the coming of God through Gospel of Christ. The zeal and enthusiasm of devoted Christians will help to change this world."

There will be a Luther league meeting Sunday evening at 6:30 under the leadership of Jimmie Jensen. The devotional topic will be "Life Service." The Sunday school will convene at 9:45 a. m. There will be an executive meeting Monday evening while Tuesday evening at 8 there will be a church council meeting. The Missionary society will meet Friday evening under the leadership of Mrs. G. D. Keister. Mrs. Anna Kurtz will be hostess and the topic will be "Fresh Furrows."

Children of the church will meet Sunday in the Sunday school room at 11 a. m. There will be preaching services at the Washingtonville Lutheran church at 7:30 in the evening.

"The Christian church has grown by the very effective process of sharing the convictions of the believers with those who were not numbered in the bounds of the Kingdom. The fellowship of the church was very limited in the beginning. Soon it began to reach out into every direction. The cruel hand of persecution served the purpose of God in sending the Christian Gospel to other cities and countries. It was a program of sharing Christ with those people who did not have Him. This method of personal evangelism is still powerful and effective."

Cleveland Pastor Will Speak at Church of God

R. G. Huggins, pastor of the Church of God of Cleveland, will be the guest speaker at the morning worship periods at the Church of God tomorrow.

The Ladies' Bible society will meet at the home of Mrs. Robert Mayhew at 2 p. m. on Thursday. The leader for the devotional will be Mrs. Clell Riffle.

UNEXPECTED NOISE MAY UPSET HEALTH

(By United Press)

STATE COLLEGE, Pa.—Unexpected noise, rattling and unexpected noises may do serious harm to the human body's nervous system, Dr. R. K. Bernhard, head of the department of engineering at Pennsylvania State college, believes.

Dr. Bernhard, who has just published studies measuring the effect of sounds and vibration on both inanimate structures and human behavior, said that "there are definite limits to the amounts of noise and tremors the body can bear."

He said that noise alone can never destroy a building, but it can harm the human body seriously.

The body can adapt itself to a certain extent to constant noise or to regularly repeated mechanical vibrations, he said, but it may be "definitely damaged" by sudden, unexpected sounds, by tremors, or by the combination of noise and mechanical vibrations.

Explaining the difficulty of devising instruments to measure the effects of noise on human beings, Dr. Bernhard recommended that medical doctors and psychologists co-operate with engineers in solving noise and tremor problems.

11 Three-Year-Olds Set To Run In Classic Kentucky Derby

PORTER'S CAP, WHIRLAWAY, OUR BOOTS ARE HIGH

Over Two - Million - Dollar Betting Stakes Are Indicated

(By Associated Press)
LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 3. — Months of minute preparations ended for the pick of the nation's three-year-old thoroughbreds today as they brought their $75,000 argument to Churchill Downs' classic mile and quarter for the 67th running of the Kentucky Derby.

Eleven horses, 10 colts and a lone gelding, were named overnight for the richest derby since the little red horse, Aristides, started this growing American madness in 1875. There was a possibility, however, that only 10 would parade to the barriers at 5:45 p. m., Eastern Standard time.

May Scratch Market Wise
Lou Tufano, Jamaica, N. Y., paving contractor, said that he planned to scratch Market Wise, Wood Memorial winner, unless rain softened the racing strip as he feared the hard, pasteboard track would cause permanent injury to his colt's none too good foot.

Meanwhile, the grooms at the track threaten to strike unless the management agreed to pay $10 for leading a winning horse over to the paddock.

Col. Matt Winn, president of the Downs, predicted a record smashing attendance of close to 160,000 with $2,000,000 pouring through the mutual machines for the first time since $2,096,613 was wagered in 1926.

From Far and Near
There probably is no other sporting event that so completely takes over a city as does the Derby. From far and near came a cross section of American life to pay homage to king thoroughbred. Prices in hotels and restaurants skyrocketed.

The race itself was so wide open that one man's opinion was as good as another.

Royce Martin's Our Boots, battling the jinx that has kept any Belmont Futurity winner from ever capturing the Derby, Charles S. (Lucky) Howard's Porter's Cap and Warren Wright's Whirlaway came in for the bulk of the support but there was no standout.

Auto Industry May Broaden Into Aviation Field After War

(By United Press)
DETROIT—There are increasing indications that the automobile industry will expand into the broadening field of commercial and private aviation after the present crisis is passed.

The possibility that car manufacturers would turn their vast resources into mass production of planes when the market assumed some proportions has been accentuated ever since they started giving aid to the hard-pressed aircraft companies for defense production a few months ago.

Many observers believe that an aftermath of the war will be a demand for "flier" planes by thousands of men who are trained as pilots in the defense program, and pass up this lucrative field.

Special Divisions Busy
In the rush to produce bombers, aircraft companies have sub-contracted much of their work to automotive concerns which merely take the blue-prints and go into production. The stimulus of these special aircraft divisions in the motor companies may be enough to turn them toward research and designs of their own when the defense situation has eased.

General Motors Corp. already has developed the Allison plane engine and has another division producing aero products, while the Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. are experimenting with plane engines of a powerful, new design. The Packard Motor Car Co., Buick, Studebaker, Hudson and Graham Paige are making plane engines or engine parts under license from aircraft companies.

General Motors, Ford, Chrysler, Hudson, Briggs and Murray body are preparing to manufacture bomber parts and sub-assemblies and with this experience it is possible they will venture further into aviation if an expected market for small planes develops.

Plastic Plane Considered
Ford recently announced intentions of developing a plastic "flier" plane, priced for the average family. Few manufacturers including the aircraft people doubt that Ford can do with a small plane the same that he did with his Model T.

General Motors owns a large block of stock in the North American Aviation Co., and could easily push through mass production plans at that outfit.

It is pointed out, however, that few automobile companies have done research work in the aircraft field and some that formerly tried to go outside their own field eventually gave up. A broadened market would permit plane output on a mass production basis, however, and no other industry in the world can assemble a complex machine faster than automotive firms.

Ford with his huge tri-motor transports in the early 20's set an entirely new pace for the struggling aircraft concerns. He withdrew from the business later but always has been intrigued with the possibilities of making an inexpensive plane.

CLEAR SUNNY DAY WILL FAVOR RELAY CONTENDERS HERE

Preliminaries Under Way This Afternoon; Finals Start at 7 P. M.

Fred E. Cope, manager of the Salem Night Relays, must "live right." If he did not, his prayers for sunshine today would have surely been lost among the thousands drifting heavenward with the request for rain to relieve parched fields.

But with a clear sunny day, a lightly sprinkled track, three hundred athletes, and thousands of expected fans, Cope is now a cheerful, though busy, man. His only statement today was a reiteration that spectators should note that gates will open at 6:30 p. m. for the finals. The preliminaries will be run off this afternoon.

The complete schedule for the evening follows:

7:30 p. m. 120 Yd. High Hurdles.

WINNING STREAKS DOT BIG LEAGUE RECORDS EARLY

Dodgers, Indians, Cardinals Rack Up Long Rows Of Victories

(By Associated Press)
This spring is setting some of a record in winning streaks of the major leagues—if not in length, then certainly in breadth.

The Brooklyn Dodgers, dazling the baseball world for a while by running their string to nine games, now, before the shine has worn off this feat, it is endangered by both the Cleveland Indians and St. Louis Cardinals.

Light for Tribe
The Indians, American league leaders, have won eight in a row and the National League pace-setting Cards have taken seven straight.

Cleveland, considered a light-hitting combination at the start of the season, has blossomed out as an array of hitters and unworked 56 safeties in its last four games. This power helped the veteran Mel Harder get credit for his third straight victory yesterday, 7-3, against the Boston Red Sox. Jeff Heath hit a triple with the bases loaded, Hal Trosky made three hits, including a home run, and Ken Keltner smacked three for extra bases.

The Cardinals punched out a 4-0 triumph over the Phillies yesterday with another of their young pitchers, Howard Krist, turning in a five-hit performance.

The Dodgers showed no signs of a letdown after Cincinnati's interruption of their winning streak as they crushed the Chicago Cubs 7-3. Whitlow Wyatt hurled four-hit ball for his fourth straight victory against one defeat.

13 Inning Tie
The New York Giants and Pittsburgh Pirates played the season's first tie game, 7-7, yielding to darkness after 13 innings.

The Washington Senators and St. Louis Browns came up with another marathon which Washington won 7-4 in 12 innings. The payoff came on Rick Ferrell's single with the bases loaded followed by Pitcher Sid Hudson's double.

The Chicago White Sox coaxed off the New York Yankees, 8-4. Ted Lyons held them to five hits. The Detroit Tigers kept the artillery white hot by reeling off 17 hits to beat the Philadelphia Athletics 15-1 behind the seven-hit hurling of Schoolboy Rowe.

DEFENSE INCOME DRIVE IS STARTED

vised that every individual and every corporation will bear its fair share of the tax burden.

Then, without additional interpretation, he declared:

"The income tax cannot fix the tax liability of individuals and corporations with equity as long as the tax base is defined to exclude substantial and significant elements of income."

Some tax experts here thought the President might have reference to tax exemptions on public securities. Others observed that the sentence might point toward possible lowering of income tax exemptions.

Meanwhile, in the house ways and means committee where the new tax legislation will originate, sentiment appeared developing against adoption of untaxed economic devices such as the flexible income tax system advocated by a group of 170 economists.

The flexible tax system, under which the rate would fluctuate with living costs, was advanced chiefly as a means of offsetting the inflationary effects of the nation's multi-billion dollar defense spending program.

Committee members said privately, however, they did not believe the inflation danger was sufficient imminent to warrant the government embarking on any "experimental" economic policies such as the flexible tax system or compulsory diversion of savings into government securities.

Ohio's legislature is aiding a cause, too. A bill establishing uniform traffic code for the state having passed the house of representatives, awaits senate approval. The house, after spirited debate, voted to increase from 45 to 55 miles an hour a speed limit outside municipalities but informed sources indicate this would be stricken from the measure in the senate.

period a year ago. Mahoning county had 32 as against 30. Only one of the state's most thickly populated counties—Hamilton—registered a decrease in auto death rate as the nine months reported 200 deaths for first third of the year, a total greater than for the corresponding period last year.

Six of the nine counties, Montgomery and Tuscarawas reported increases, while Franklin with 37 and Summit with 25—were holding the tragedy even with the last year's figures.

Thirty-three lives were lost in Montgomery county roads last Jan. 1 compared with only six in the like period in 1940. In Tuscarawas 25 have perished so far this year against six a year ago.

Law enforcement officers generally agreed that speed was chief cause of the fatality increase.

Clark county autos killed 21 in 1941 compared with 15 at the same time last year. In Lucas, died this year, 31 in 1940; Clayhogue's toll was 69 for 1941 and for 1940.
